

CitationShares Introduces New Programs to Give Customers Environmental, Philanthropic Options

GREENWICH, CT— CitationShares, a private aviation company, today announced new associations with two organizations: TerraPass, a leading retailer of carbon offsets and consumer energy efficiency products, and Corporate Angel Network (CAN), a public charity that arranges free flights to treatment for cancer patients.

“We understand that serving our customers includes offering opportunities to expand both their charitable giving and environmental stewardship,” said Steve O’Neil, CEO of CitationShares. “We are thrilled to make these options available to our customers.”

Through CitationShares’ association with CAN, CitationShares customers will be able to donate flight hours aboard CitationShares jets to a CAN Jet Card account for use to transport cancer patients in need of specialized and life prolonging treatment. Through TerraPass, customers will be able to balance their “carbon footprint” by purchasing carbon offsets for the hours they fly on a CitationShares jet.

“TerraPass demonstrates a key component of our evolving environmental strategy,” said Woody Harford, Senior Vice President, Chief Revenue Officer, “and CAN affords our clients a way to directly impact the lives of others through their relationship with CitationShares.”

TerraPass and CAN are the latest of many programs from CitationShares that take steps to address areas that are important to our customers and employees. CitationShares recently placed second in the Earth Day Commuter Challenge race with a 61 percent participation rate by employees. Later this summer, the company will be receiving an award from the Connecticut Department of Transportation for this effort to create a better environment.

About CitationShares

Founded in 2000, CitationShares is an industry leader offering individuals and businesses the advantages of private jet travel through its innovative fractional and whole-aircraft ownership programs, Citelines and JetForth, and through its unique Vector Fleet JetCard, which allows customers access to its entire fleet of Citation aircraft on an hourly basis. CitationShares works exclusively with Cessna's popular Citation jets—Citation Bravo, Citation CJ3, Citation XLS, and Citation Sovereign—which are serviced and maintained at the factory-level. CitationShares operates the youngest fleet in the air by the best pilots in the industry, while setting the standard for safety and customer service. CitationShares is majority owned and controlled by Cessna Aircraft Company, a Textron (NYSE: TXT) company.
